We did nothing to date in the forenoon and in the afternoon we (Alfred, Norman and I) went up to Bearhole Pond. We parked at a place about below the junction of the roads below the lake and started for the mountain-top where the herons used to nest. As we did not start from the site of the old millpond we did not strike the old logging road, but we had no difficulty in finding our way up through the woods to the summit. The general appearance looked natural. But the woods where the herons used to be had been cut down. Near the summit there was a burn where the ground was covered with raspberries, and as the bears had trampled down many paths in eating the berries. They had also dug up some old squirrels' caches and had found the back from stumps in their search for insects. On the summit which was nearly level white pines, which had formerly been a pasture

From a stone wall crossed it, we rode awhile on the great high, glacier worn, from which we had a magnificent view of Ossipee Mts and the foot-hills between it and Danville. I took a picture of the pond which we looked down upon. We could see also the hills

Friday Aug. 1.

Up in good time and after getting breakfast went down to the river and worked on the toppled trees.

Left about eleven and after getting ready we all drove up to Chocoma where we were invited by Corinne Carver Gibson to dinner. Arrived late and had a fine spread.

They wanted to go to Conway so Evelyn drove them up. Alfred took me (and Ned) to the Madison Boulder and I took a couple of pictures. We then drove up on the Conway road and met the rest of the party.

Saturday Aug 2 To Boston

Spent most of the afternoon at the river clearing away the logs. Alfred helped me cut the big logs. We found many Caddisworms on sticks at the bottom.
Decided to take the 5.01 train for Boston so picked up and Alfred took me to the train.

Margaret and Evelyn had been away all day at an auction, and arrived at the station with the children at 10 to 5. so I said goodbye to all of them at once.

The ride to Boston was warm but not very uncomfortable. Got there at 8.52 and after a lunch got the 9.30 for N. Woburn.
Found most of the family in bed. But Mamma got up and we visited awhile - all well.

Woburn.

Sunday Aug 3.

Stayed about the house during the forenoon. In the afternoon Harry took us up to see the place where we reached the junction (Harry) who built the summit ~~about~~ 7 bells tall about 14 years ago.
Found them to be charming people, and very much interested in nature. They have a fine set of rock gardens somewhat handicapped by dearth of water.

Cleveland Park Sept 26, 1930

This evening just before dusk, I saw a woodcock in the yard next door. She was within 10 feet of the street when first seen almost beneath a bird bath, and shielded by some shrubbery. Passing accidentally seemed not to alarm her. She walked about rather rapidly, holding the body nearly horizontally, with the bill close to the earth. She bowed often, but never deeply, but seemed to pick up something. Presently she worked back from the street following the edge of a deep flower bed, and sometimes on the adjoining lawn, threading in and out among the plants. Once she stopped still for a few minutes, evidently having seen us at the window. But we kept still and she moved on. From when we looked down at her from the bedroom window, she was not over 20 feet away. Soon she walked out on the open lawn several feet from the flower bed, and then flew away, up the street and over a house down toward the valley. All the time she was in the yard she was never more than 10 feet from one house or the other. Evelyn and I watched her.

Oct 18 To Kennett Square Pa

2 P.M. to drive to Salem Mass to attend the A.O.U. meeting.
We went via Baltimore.

The foliage was beautiful reached Kennett square about dark and stopped at a house on the left

supper I looked up

things in general and birds in particular.
Mr Pennock said there had
